Tuesday, March 29 at 5 pm
Elvehjem L140 (800 University Ave)
Movie screening followed by Q & A with the filmmaker

Standstill (2013) is the first Canadian feature film with the majority of its dialogue in the Mohawk language. Shot in beautiful black and white, Standstill manages to infuse pointed commentary about the current state of both the Aboriginal and Palestinian communities.

Sponsored by the University Lectures Committee, the Middle East Studies Program, the Department of Comparative Literature and Folklore Studies, the African Studies Program, and the Center for Visual Cultures
